DIALOG AXIATA PLC: USE OF HRM PRACTICES TO SUPPORT ORGANISATIONAL PERFORMANCE

Dialog Axiata PLC is a leading telecommunications company in Sri Lanka, providing mobile, broadband and digital services. Due to rapid technological changes and high competition in the telecom industry, the company places strong importance on effective human resource management. According to the Dialog Axiata PLC annual report, employees are considered essential in achieving organisational objectives and maintaining service quality. The company's long term HRM strategy enhances digital customer experiences and is designed to align with its vision of multi-sensory connectivity resulting, in empowerment and enrichment.

The company also focuses on attracting the right people. Recruitment processes are structured to bring in employees who have the right skills and who fit with the company's values. The emphasis is on hiring people who can adapt to new technologies and changing customer expectations. This ensures that the company has the right talent to support its digital strategy.

Training and development are another important HR practice at Dialog. Employees take part in regular training programmes, both in-house and with external facilitators. These programmes help to improve technical skills, leadership abilities, and overall professional growth. Leadership development is also a focus, with certain employees being prepared for future management roles. This not only helps employees advance in their careers but also creates a strong internal talent pool for the company.

Dialog also uses a formal performance management system to evaluate employee performance. Employees are evaluated based on clear performance targets linked to organisational goals. Performance-based rewards and recognition systems are used to motivate employees and encourage higher productivity. For example, employees are recognised for achievements that support the company's objectives, which keeps motivation high.

The company also focuses on employee engagement and well-being. According to the annual report, engagement surveys, wellness programmes, and flexible working arrangements are used to improve job satisfaction and work-life balance. These efforts help maintain employee morale and reduce staff turnover. Additionally, the use of digital HR tools supports more efficient operations and aligns with the company's sustainability goals.

Dialog Axiata PLC demonstrates how HRM functions like recruitment, training, performance management, and employee engagement can work together to support business performance. The company shows that investing in people is not just about filling roles, but also about developing talent for the future.
