MAS HOLDINGS PLC: BUILDING INCLUSIVE WORKFORCES FOR SUSTAINABLE GROWTH

MAS Holdings PLC is a global apparel and textile manufacturer headquartered in Sri Lanka, with operations across multiple countries and a large workforce. The company's sustainability reports indicate that its people strategy is closely connected to diversity, inclusion, employee well-being, and long-term organizational goals. MAS believes that a workforce that reflects diverse perspectives and feels supported and valued contributes not only to employee satisfaction but also to sustainable business success.

A key focus of Human Resource Management (HRM) at MAS is diversity and inclusion. The company employs tens of thousands of workers, around 70% of whom are women. This gender diversity is recognized as a strategic asset rather than simply a demographic characteristic. For example, the organisation aims to empower 100% of women on the factory floor and increase women's representation in management roles to 30%. MAS has established formal policies, such as Equal Opportunity policies, to ensure that individuals of all genders, ages, nationalities, and identities are treated fairly. These commitments are not merely stated in policy documents; the company integrates inclusion goals into leadership practices and fosters accountability through measurable targets. This demonstrates that inclusion is embedded within HR practices and organizational culture.

Employee well-being and support programs are another important aspect of MAS's HRM activities. Various initiatives are designed to enhance employees' productivity, satisfaction, and long-term engagement with the organisation. Family-friendly policies, flexible working arrangements, and awareness programs on health, safety, and personal development reflect the company's emphasis on supporting workers' overall well-being. For example, gender equity initiatives such as Women Go Beyond (WGB) have provided hundreds of thousands of women employees with opportunities for career progression, sustainability engagement, innovation, and life-skills development. These efforts demonstrate that HRM at MAS extends beyond recruitment and performance management to include meaningful support that positively influences employees' lives.

Training and awareness programs also play a significant role in the company's approach to inclusion and employee development. Training is provided to both direct handlers and relevant management representatives to ensure that teams remain up to date and well informed about Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs), emergency response protocols, and updates to organizational guidelines or regulations. MAS also conducts communication workshops and leadership development programs aimed at building awareness of diverse identities and encouraging inclusive behavior across the organization. This continuous learning approach highlights HRM's role in shaping organizational culture and aligning workforce behavior with the strategic values of equity and respect. MAS Holdings uses goal-setting techniques in which employees are evaluated based on specific Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) aligned with organizational objectives and departmental targets. MAS applies Management by Objectives, whereby managers and employees jointly set performance goals at the beginning of the review period and assess the level of achievement at the end of the cycle.

Overall, strategies such as promoting diversity, supporting employee well-being, and encouraging continuous learning demonstrate how HRM at MAS contributes to building a strong and inclusive workforce. These practices support sustainable growth and organizational resilience. By treating human resource policies as a strategic lever, MAS strengthens its organizational identity and long-term success in a highly competitive global industry.
